Messrs. Jackson and Debevoise called today at their request on Mr. Johnson to discuss the memoranda "The Mission of the Free Europe Committee" and "Free Europe Committee and the Berlin Crisis" which were forwarded by the Free Europe Committee under cover of a letter dated July 3, 1961 to the Secretary.

Mr. Jackson referred to the call made on the Secretary by Mr. Ernest Gross, Chairman of the Board of the FEC, and Mr. John Richardson, President of the FEC, on June 17, which concerned FEC activities, and to the above-mentioned memoranda. He explained that the purpose of today's call was to discuss the FEC views set forth in the memoranda. Mr. Jackson described the FEC and Radio Free Europe (RFE) as a good instrument, and an instrument in being, which can be used to make the enemy say "ouch". Mr. Jackson said that he did not feel the suggestions included in the memoranda were inflammatory, but that they constituted political warfare designed to remind Khrushchev of an area about which he has not recently had to feel apprehensive. He expressed the view that Khrushchev could not afford a nuclear war, which the US would survive but which would send Khrushchev's world "down the drain". For these reasons Mr. Jackson felt that Khrushchev is not prepared to fight and that in Eastern Europe we have a place and an instrument (the FEC and RFE) for taking the initiative--a program designed to create Soviet concern in Eastern Europe and to make Khrushchev think twice before pressing the Berlin issue.
