On October 30, the 8th session of the Supreme People's Assembly closed.

Comrade Hong Myeong-hui [sic], the Vice-President of the Council of Ministers, discussed the law on the creation of local state institutions.

In the closing session, [the members of the Supreme People's Assembly] voted for call upon all workers, peasants, intellectuals, students, merchants, representatives in the South Korean Parliament, to all parties and mass organizations, to [all] officers and soldiers in the puppet army, as well as to all the people in the state leadership, to organize a joint session [of the two parliaments] in Seoul or Pyongyang in 1955.

[They requested that] this session be attended by representatives of the South Korean Parliament and of the Supreme People's Assembly, or by the representatives of all parties and mass organizations in both parts.

Signed

Ambassador Tatu Jianu
