I received Bulgarian Ambassador Georgy Kostov Bogdanov at his request.

The Ambassador provided information that the Korean embassy security force is asking for identity documents and the purpose of their visit from people of Korean nationality who want to enter the Embassy grounds. He also told about DPRK MFA officials refusing to give statistical data about some types of production output and other things, referring to "a great workload", although at the time the questionnaire was sent to them they had promised a reply concerning the issues of interest to the Embassy in two or three days.

The Ambassador also said that they had been refused a subscription to the military newspaper Choson Imingun (The Korean People's Army), referring to the fact that this newspaper is given only to those embassies in Pyongyang which have military attaches. At the time it was also added that this newspaper is being sent to the Ministry of Defense of the People's Republic of Bulgaria and if the Embassy has need it can avail itself of this newspaper through its ministry.

The Ambassador then said that he wanted to get the necessary explanation from the deputy minister of foreign affairs regarding all these issues.

Minister of Foreign Affairs Pak Seong-Cheol held a showing of two films for ambassadors and counsellors of the socialist countries at the Munsiri resident (near the civilian airfield). The story of the life and revolutionary struggle of Ri Je Seon [sic] (the brother of current KWP CC Presidium member Ri Gyo-seon [sic]) was in the feature film "Zarya Zanimaetsya [The Dawn is Busy]". The film was well-made. What stands out is that the role of Kim Il Sung, who at the time led an anti-Japanese partisan struggle, is excessively praised in the film.

A color documentary, "Avgustovsky Prazdnik [August Holiday]" was shown second. The film was very well-made. The Minister said that this film is the first color film made by the Pyongyang film studio.

I told the Minister that the Embassy is able to show the Korean arts officials the feature film "The Queen of Spades". How does Pak Seong-Cheol feel about this?
The Minister replied he welcomes this showing.
